WASHINGTON, May 26.—Freeing the public to a great extent from paying extortionate charges for patented articles, the United States supreme court today sapped the strength of patent monopolies by holding that patentees have no right to fix arbitrary retail prices for their produce. In the case brought before it the court decided that retailers who cut the price set by a patentee had committed no infringement of patent. This case was one in which Blair and company, a patent medicine firm, smed James O'Donnell, a Washington druggist.
